

EXPLAINING THE AUTOMATIC TEMPORARY INJUNCTION

The very first document to be filed in a divorce is the Petition for Dissolution of Marriage. When you file the petition, you are formally asking the court to grant a dissolution of marriage. The divorce process then officially begins.

At the end of your Petition, there is an attachment called an Automatic Temporary Injunction, "ATI". The ATI is required by Oklahoma to be included in all initial divorce filings. It is used as a tool to protect both parties. It encompasses the marital estate and all its contents. Some people describe it as a 'freezing of the marital estate.

Although the ATI provides signature lines for waiving, it is almost never waived in its' entirety. Individual parts might be waived on a case by case basis. Before waiving any part of the ATI you should seek the advice of an attorney.
